RAMBLING

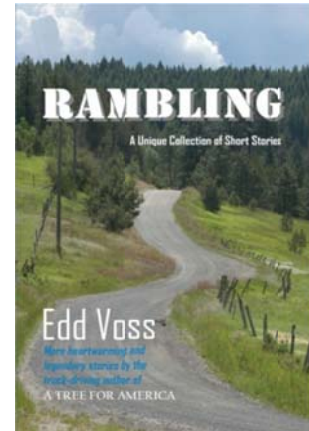

Queen Creek, AZ, November 30, 2010: BOOKS WILL BE AVAILABLE December 15 through Amazon.com and the publisher. Then within two to four weeks after December 15, you may also order through other Internet bookstores as well as your favorite on-land chain or neighborhood booksellers.

Author EDD VOSS says, "My early interest in photography led to becoming an Army photographer. But no matter where in the world I would be, the mountains always called out to me. Later on in life I began trucking and found a whole new appreciation of America. It also became a source of inspiration for my short stories. My novella "A Tree for America" came about because of a challenge put out by the editor of a trucking magazine. She had read a story about a possible movie where a bureaucrat takes a ride with a trucker delivering the nation's Christmas tree. In the movie the trucker learns about Christmas from the bureaucrat, well I wrote it the way it really should have been, just the opposite. It was published and I began to realize that I might actually have a writing talent worth pursuing. My wife and I live on a twenty-acre ranch north of Spokane, Washington. From reading my stories you will find that I love dogs and horses, and hope someday to have more of both. At present I am working on a full-length western and a fantasy novel. In the meantime, I hope you enjoy my short stories and my novella"

RAMBLING contains thirteen short stories including tales of early American history, of American soldiers and the effects of war, along with stories of nature and the wild ... all memorable stories stemming from the experiences and imagination of a man who lives in the great northwest and travels the USA in an eighteen wheeler.

Edd Voss is a family man who loves children, horses, and photography. And yes! EDD VOSS is a man who writes from the heart.

A heartwarming collection of short stories, just in time for Christmas giving:

- WELCOME HOME
